gaining. At least the large number of shares in which the foreign interest is small or nothing would seem to contain smail or nothing would seem to contain no chance of menace, and the sooner regular Stock Exchange business can be resumed the better.

It is all very well to say that investment needs have been met and can be net without an extensive lifting of the emergency embargo on business in secu-rities, but such a view denies the func-tion of speculation. It even falls to recognize the speculative content in the op-erations of investors. In the degree to which speculative dealings in securities have been going on recently in the lim-ted range permitted they have tended o promote the return of business confi-There is an old saying that when there is no vision the people perish. When there is speculation in Wall Street it means that people are looking ahead. nd signs of the speculative anticipation of future profits are among the most trustworthy guides which general business has for its own commitments.

Bearings of the Railroad Rate Case. Domestic reasons there may well be for aution in proceeding to a full and unreaution in proceeding of the stock market. The chief of these and the most valid is found in the great question to which the country wants an answer, whether the Govern-ment is to take over the railroads or leave them to the support of private capid. A complete answer is not expected om the Interstate Commerce Commission deciding the reopened Eastern rate case. ut any answer will have great significance under present circumstances be-cause Government regulation of the agencies of transportation has been so perverted in the past to the preliminaries of Government ownership.

During the recent hearings in the rate ase there were intimations on the part of the commission that it doubted its sower to sanction rate advances for the sake of sustaining railroad credit. Yet the commission has always acted as though it possessed a far greater power which is certainly not vested in it. Time and again the commission has declared that the public policy of this country is to provide a railroad system under private ownership and dependent upon the continuous supply of funds from private sources for its maintenance and increase The broadest power which the commission has is to sustain this policy, but regulaon in practice has tended to make Gov rnment ownership appear almost in-vitable because of the persistent diminuion of the attractiveness of railroad investments. As was pointed out by bankers in the ecept rate case hearings, railroad credit the standard of all credit in the country, and it is obvious what influence can emanate from the commission's new rul-ing in the Eastern rate case if it recognizes that the investor ultimately decides what is a reasonable charge for railroad service. It must be a charge which guarservice. It must be a charge which guar-antees an adequate earning power in order to yield a satisfactory margin of profit with which to protect railroad investments, or railroad credit will fall and all redit will fall with it.

the extraordinary increase of the banker's lending power. This is most conspicuous in the London money market. the extraordinary increase of the bank-er's lending power. This is most con-spicuous in the London money market, where it is the result of the expedients resorted to by the British Government for the support of the huge commitments of the British banking and business com-munity, and in the United States, where t is not in any way the consequence of artifice but the product of banking and rency reform.

There is no point in elaborating the details of the banking position and the monetary situation, which are manifest to the least discerning observer. No matter what the long range price of capital for permanent investment is going to be the price of money for short time emthe price of money for short time em-ployment is falling. Indeed interesting doubts are already being entertained in Indeed interesting some quarters if the effects of the war in raising the price of capital have not been exaggerated when there is so much credit awaiting absorption; that is, so much bank lending power to be employed to keep the business world going until capital supplies have been recruited. But regardless of what may happen in the future monetary conditions are given to-day which according to all precedent should have only one event.

The effect of a great increase in the volume of funds available to meet demands for credit has always been to advance prices. Rising prices always increase volumes of trade wherever trading of any kind is done and the process goes of any kind is done and the process goes on until credit becomes overextended. The operation is almost automatic once it starts and its commencement seems now to depend only on the revival of sufficient confidence to express itself in a demand for credits for business purposes.
